Reinventing tradition

Danish companies are raiding their enviable design heritage to transform classic pieces using cutting-edge techniques and materials. Georg Jensen's new take on the classic Koppel watch is a fob-style timepiece for contemporary urbanites. Cane-Line recreates the sense of wicker furniture in durable, man-made fibres. New to the UK, Tine K Home champions a mix of charm and edge with its updated ceramics (see page 27) and basketware. In keeping with the 'cosy at home' translation of Danish buzz word hygge, Morsø's 7600 series wood-burning stoves by Monica Ritterband have an enlarged viewing window giving the look of a roaring hearth, but in eco-friendly form. Montana, known for its flexible storage systems, channels the functional simplicity so inherent to Danish design in a sleek new TV/hi-fi unit which has built-in speakers – sure to be a modern classic.

CLOCKWISE FROM RIGHT TV/hi-fi unit, £2,230, Montana at Aram Store. Thermal cup, £71.50, Royal Copenhagen. Koppel pocket watch, £565, Georg Jensen. Model 7648 wood-burning stove, £1,740 Monica Ritterband for Morsø. Breeze chair, £679; cushion, £145; ottoman, £175; all Cane-Line at Barbed.
